

In Rush to White House, 'No Child' Left Behind

By Maria Glod, Staff Writer Washington Post, 9/15/2008

For the next president, one of the first domestic challenges will be to reshape the No Child Left Behind law, hailed six years ago as a bipartisan solution to America's education troubles.

But in their race for the White House, Sens. John McCain (R-Ariz.) and Barack Obama (D-Ill.) are distancing themselves from what has become a tainted brand.

View article on Washington Post